To mark rows thread a differently coloured yarn (preferably a slightly thinner one than that being used to make up the garment itself) through the eye of a tapestry needle and weave through the row, working alternately under and over the stitches to match the pattern.

Tips on keeping fit.

Do you tire easily when knitting? Then first check to make sure that you really are relaxed when sitting. A foot-rest under your feet frequently works wonders!

Here are a few gymnastic exercises especially designed with busy knitters in mind:

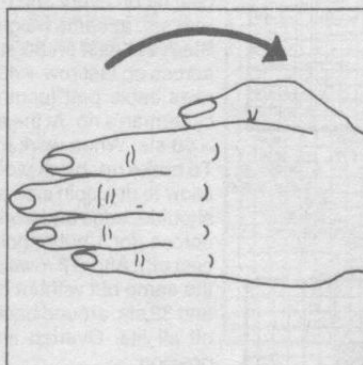

Almost everyone can play - or pretend to play - the piano. Pretend to play the piano on the armrests of your chair with both your hands for just a few seconds.

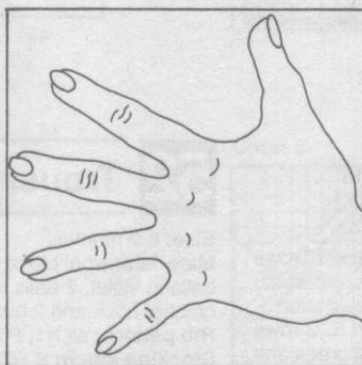

Then bring your hands to the tabletop and reach first forwards, then to the side, then up - pretend to dance with your hands.

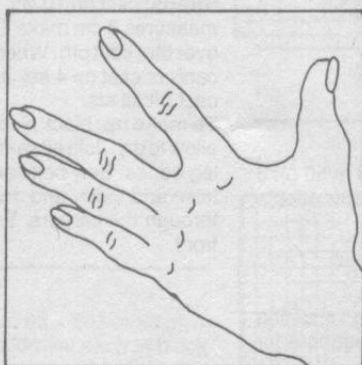

Stretch your entire body and your arms too, of course, up as far as you can go. Using both hands, pretend to unscrew a light bulb out of the fitting. Do you feel how this relaxes your shoulders?

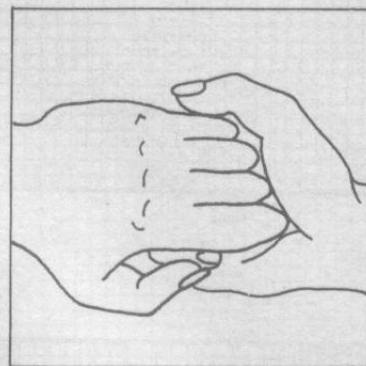

Bend your arms and press the palms of your hands together. Now turn your hands inwards, i.e. the tips of your fingers point towards your body. Then turn the tips of your fingers away from your body. That is great for your wrist.

Now, keeping that position, stretch the fingers as far apart as they will possibly go - and then close them up again.

Now stretch the fingers apart individually, and then close them up again. This relaxes your fingers too.

Bend your arms, interlock your fingers and try to pull your hands apart as hard as you can.

And if you should want to keep working for longer than usual, have a bright lightbulb shine down on your neck. This is warming. The blood flows through your muscles better and prevents them from hurting.

*

Letting your arms and shoulders hang limply forwards about every half hour or so also relaxes extremely well.

*

Drawing circles with your head frequently also helps relax strained neck muscles. First let your head droop forwards loosely, then rock it backwards and forwards several times. Then slowly draw circles with your head in a clockwise direction. Keep yourself relaxed, making the circles as big as possible. Draw three circles in one direction, then another three in the other. Finally let your head droop forwards loosely a couple of times. Don't you feel a lot better already?

*

And here another tip against tiredness: first lay down comfortably, then place cold buds of cotton wool on your eyelids.

*

Leave for about five minutes, then turn over onto your stomach and put the cotton wool buds on your neck.
