General Instructions

What's more girly than lace? And what's more stylish and sophisticated than an elegant, beaded lace choker? These designs run the gamut from Victorian-style confections to funky contemporary styles, so that you can match any outfit or any mood. Best of all, they take only an hour or two to complete. Make one in an afternoon, and wear it out on the town the same evening!

All of these designs can be done using a bedspread-weight thread or equivalent and a 2mm crochet hook. Just complete a 12-inch length of lace, then thread the ribbon through as directed, leaving about a 12-inch length of ribbon extending beyond either end of the lace. This will allow the choker to be tied around the neck using the ribbon, without need for clasps or findings of any sort.

Have fun using different types and colors of threads to match your wardrobe or suit your look. Keep in mind that gauge will change slightly depending on thickness of thread and size of hook; check the length of each repeat and adjust the number of repeats needed to achieve your desired length. Similarly, appropriate sizes of beads are listed, but type and color can be changed to suit individual taste. The ribbon can be either satin or velvet, and can match or contrast with the thread used for the lace. Thus, there is an endless variety of combinations to choose from, and the resulting lace/choker can be personalized in any number of ways.

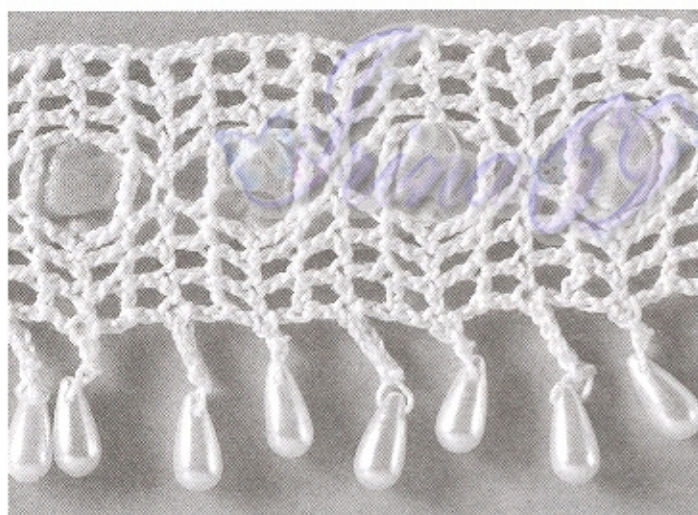

The laces in this book may also be made to any length by simply adding more repeats until the desired length is reached. Apply them to clothing, purses, etc. as an embellishment, either by sewing in place or using a permanent fabric glue. If using lace as an appliquéd embellishment, trim the ribbon to within $\frac{1}{2}$ " of the end of the lace, and tuck the raw ends under the body of the lace when sewing or gluing to the fabric surface. Or, use the lace without the ribbon if desired. Try working long lengths of lace using baby yarn or chenille yarn for a scarf, or using jute or nylon macramé cord to make a belt.

The possibilities are endless! Be creative, and have fun!

Helpful Hints

All the beads needed for each project will need to be strung onto the thread before beginning to crochet. Each pattern indicates how many beads per repeat of lace will be required; but it's always a good idea to string on more than you think you will need, just in case the gauge changes due to thread size or tension. To prepare the end of the thread so that it will not fray while threading on the beads, coat it with Fray-Chek™ or similar fabric stiffener to about 1" from the starting end of the thread, and allow it to dry for about $\frac{1}{2}$ hour before beginning to string the beads. You can also use a light coating of transparent craft glue, or run the end of the thread along a candle or block of paraffin to coat with wax, or dip lightly into melted wax and stroke off the excess between your fingers, to stiffen the thread and hold it together. Once all the necessary beads have been strung onto the thread, this stiffened end may be cut off before beginning to crochet.

Once the ribbon has been threaded through the lace, it is a good idea to fasten the ends of the lace in position on the ribbon, either with a dab of fabric glue or a few small stitches. This will ensure that the lace will stay in position and not slide around on the ribbon during wearing. Trim off any fraying on the ends of the ribbon, and trim both ends of the ribbon to a point or at an angle to minimize fraying during wearing. You may also coat the very edge of each cut end with Fray-Chek™ if desired, but test it first on a scrap piece of ribbon to be sure it won't discolor the ribbon or make it too scratchy to wear comfortably.

Thread ribbon through lace, weaving ribbon over each ch 5 and under centers of each sheaf. Pull ribbon through so that about 12" of ribbon extends from both sides of lace. See "Helpful Hints" on Page 3 for further information about finishing the choker.

As a variation, you can use small beads for the ch beads on the sides and a larger bead for the center of each sheaf. To do this, begin by stringing on five small beads and one large bead, then eight small beads and one large bead for each repeat to the end of the lace, and end with three small beads. Again, it is usually a good idea to string on enough beads for two or three more repeats than you think you will need, just in case.
